Uncle Tom's Cabin

The good old classic, Uncle Tom's Cabin, was presented to Stony Plain theatre goers on Friday night, and was fairly well patronised. The price, 75c., was pretty steep for an old fashioned two bit show, and this probably kept a number away, beside the counter attraction of a dance close to town. All the good old stunts were pulled off and seemed to be appreciated by the audience. In fact everything was there except the advertised "most gorgeous and appropriate costumes" and "the finest special scenery that the eye of mortal man ever gazed upon."

The Greatest Of All Assets

The award of the Nobel prize this year to Dr. F. G. Banting, of Toronto, the discoverer of the Insulin treatment for diabetes, is a well deserved tribute and recognition of what has been hailed throughout the medical world as the greatest boon conferred on mankind in preventative medicine since the discoveries of Pasteur. And Dr. Banting has conferred additional honor upon himself by immediately donating $10,000 of his prize money towards the establishment of a Fund for medical research in Canada.

The whole world is at last beginning to take seriously to heart the truth of the old saying that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Governments the world over, assisted by great voluntary organizations like the anti-Tuberculosis Associations, the Red Cross Society, and kindred bodies, and men of great wealth, are engaged in work of the most energetic kind not only to find scientific means of combatting and preventing disease, but in educating the masses of the people everywhere that by the adoption and adherence to simple health rules most of the sickness and disease, and consequent suffering that now afflicts the human race can be completely banished.

Yellow fever, once the scourge of certain countries, is now practically unknown. It has been isolated into a few small areas and successful efforts are now in progress to stamp it out entirely. It has been established that through the use of toxin anti-toxin people can be made immune from diphtheria. Smallpox, once a common disease which carried off people by the thousands, is now quite rare, and most of the cases which develop of a mild type. It, too, is being wiped out.

Tuberculosis is still a terrible scourge, but it has now been demonstrated that it is not an incurable disease, and if treated in its earlier stages can be successfully overcome. More important still is the arousing of people generally to a knowledge that tuberculosis can be prevented by the adoption of simple rules of living, plain wholesome food, lots of fresh air and sunshine.

In fact, nature has provided free of charge all the essentials of good health if people would only make use of them. Sleeping in rooms with windows open and kept fresh and clean by sunshine and fresh air, instead of closing them up like prison cells, if followed in all homes would do more to eradicate tuberculosis than all the sanatoria ever built. It would result in stronger, healthier children both physically and mentally. Next in importance to fresh air and sunshine comes the plentiful use of water and milk.

The adoption of habits of cleanliness, washing the hands before handling food, care of the teeth, protection of the homes against flies, the careful disposal of all refuse and rubbish, and the guarding against contamination of the water supply—these things do not cost much money and if systematically followed do not take much time. If persisted in they will result in better health and in the saving of countless dollars in doctor, drug and hospital bills, to say nothing of the greater prosperity accruing to the home and individual through increased earning power resulting from good health, a strong body and a clear mind.

Many people complain of hard times and of accumulated debts, and all too frequently give as an excuse that they have had much sickness, with consequent heavy expense on the one hand and loss of earning power on the other. But they never stop to consider that, instead of such sickness being an excuse, it in many instances merely constitutes an indictment of themselves; that they are not only themselves responsible for the hard times and accumulated debts, but for the sickness from which they or their families have suffered and which brought on their financial difficulties.

The average employer of large staffs of male and female help loses more through lost time and disorganization of his business caused by the absence of employees through sickness than he does through strikes or the general dislocation of business caused by economic depression. But because such losses are not of a spectacular kind, possibly small in themselves but going on like an unnoticed leak in a pipe, he pays little attention to them or to the provision of preventative safeguards.

It is encouraging, however, to note that a general awakening is taking place, that the work of education on health matters is having its effect, that legislative enactments are following closely on the heels of medical discoveries; in a word, that the Twentieth Century Crusade for Good Health is proving more and more effective, and that people are beginning to realize that health is more important and a far greater worldly asset than wealth; that the latter without the former is of little value to the possessor of it.

The Tablets are a sure and safe medicine for little ones and never fail to regulate the bowels and stomach, thus relieving all the minor ills from which children suffer. ### Moved In a Circle

A mid-western paper reports one of the most "vicious circles" we have chanced to read about. A young man worked hard, saved his money and bought a house. Then he and his wife decided to buy an automobile. They mortgaged the house to buy the automobile and lately had to mortgage the automobile to pay the interest on the mortgage on the house. That spiral truly winds to a tight place.—Youth's Companion.

And with that he got into what I always called his 'buggy' and off he drove. They do be havin' strange names for things these days."

Only Toy Dogs Admitted

Dogs and Poultry Are Barred From Entry to Canada

Hereafter "toy dogs" only will be admitted to Canada from the United Kingdom. "Real dogs" must remain outside the boundaries of the dominion. A ministerial order, issued by the Department of Agriculture, excludes poultry and dogs "with the exception of toy dogs" coming from the United Kingdom.

The order, issued under the authority of the Animal Contagious Disease Act, is designed to protect Canadian dogs and poultry from the importation of disease.

Hansen Has Thrown His Crutches Away

"Tanlac is the only thing I can give any credit for helping me," is the precise statement made recently by C. B. Hansen, a well known carpenter, 12835 121st St., West Edmonton, Alberta.

"For three years I had rheumatism so bad in my right hip and foot that I couldn't hit a lick of work. In fact, I couldn't get around at all without my cane or crutches. My pain was almost unbearable. I couldn't sleep and got down to a mere shadow of my old self.

"My case was so stubborn that it took a long, hard pull, but Tanlac finally brought me around in fine shape. It gave me a fine appetite and such complete relief from the rheumatism that I put my crutches aside and went back to work. It increased my weight twenty-five pounds and left me feeling like a new man."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute.

Deplores Pessimistic Outlook

Everyone Should Help in Reconstruction of World Says Rev. Henry van Dyke

The appearance of so many pessimistic books of late was deplored by the Rev. Dr. Henry van Dyke in a sermon in the Park Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, of which his only son, the Rev. Tertius van Dyke, is the pastor. "When Elijah went into the cave he had a bad case of pessimism," declared Dr. van Dyke. "He thought all the world was wrong, going to the bad, and that he only was faithful to God and to duty. He attempted to prove this by having nothing more to do with the world and isolating himself in a cave. There are many men today affected by this form of self-righteous pessimism. They tell us that the 'great Nordic race' is vanishing, that 'the revolt against civilization is sure to succeed, that 'Europe is hopeless,' and therefore America should keep out of it, and so on. What is this but going into the cave? The still, small voice of God calls us to come out, to bear a hand in the struggle for right, to do our duty and trust God for victory.

Requisite on the Farm.—Every farmer and stock-raiser should keep a supply of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil on hand, not only as a ready remedy for ills in the family, but because it is a horse and cattle medicine of great potency. As a substitute for sweet oil for horses and cattle affected by colic it far surpasses anything that can be administered.

Two barrels of soil of Belgium and France, from Ypres and Vimy Ridge, respectively, were sent to Quebec to Rev. Canon (Chaplain) Scott to be placed under the cross of sacrifice, the soldiers' memorial in that city.

An Oil that is Famous.—Though Canada was not the birthplace of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, it is the home of that famous compound. From here its good name was spread to Central and South America, the West Indies, Australia and New Zealand. That is far afield enough to attest its excellence, for in all these countries it is on sale and in demand.

English Speaking Nations Must Work Together As Trustees Of Civilization

The United States was called upon by Right. Hon. David Lloyd George in his farewell address in the new world, to perform, along with the British Empire, its full duty to the world.

"You responded to Europe's need in 1917," he declared, "but the work is only half done, and if not completed civilization is doomed within this generation to a catastrophe such as the world has never seen.

"Your country and ours have very largely the same problems to consider and to confront. There is a natural disinclination in England to get entangled in European politics. It is traditional. We have said: 'We are an island in the Atlantic; we have got the sea between us and you,' and in the past it has proved to be just as difficult to cross the Straits of Dover as to cross the Atlantic Ocean, when the British fleet is about."

Describing the terrible toll of life and property taken by the world war and admonishing the United States not to think too harshly of Europe, he said: "There were empires in Europe that were like the planets in the heavens that have been rotted down into utter endless darkness. There were countries that were like the fixed stars in the firmament that have crashed into atoms. The earth quivers in Europe, and no one can tell how far it has been shocked out of its course. Don't be hard on Europe.

"What is the real problem in Europe today? I will tell you. In spite of the war, because Europe has been left so much to herself, she still believes in force. Why?

"France says, 'Justice never gave Alsace-Lorraine back. We had to lose a million of our young men; you, in the British Empire, had to lose 900,000 of your young men. Force gave it back to us.'

"Poland says, 'Force came at the end of 150 years, and unlocked the door of our nationality.'

"The Russian peasant says today: 'We never saw the light of liberty until the revolutionist came with his power, and blew our prison walls down.'

"What does Germany say? Germany says: 'We trusted to justice. We trusted to treaty. We are broken; we are shattered. Why? We are disarmed. We have no force.'

"That is why Europe believes in force. That is why Europe believes in violence. What is the remedy? Give Europe the conviction that right is supreme over force. Who is to do it? There are only two countries on earth who can establish that conviction, and those are the United States of America and the British Empire.

"There have been times in the history of the world where you have two or three nations that for the time being have been the trustees of civilization. One after another they have failed. New nations sprung up to take their place. The commission of trusteeship for civilization does not come from rulers or princes; it does not come from senates and parliaments, nor councils. It comes from the will of God.

"That commission is yours and ours today. The scene is a divine occasion. You responded to the invisible message in 1917, and we already had done so; but the commission is not fulfilled. The work is only half done. If it is not discharged fully—civilization is doomed within this generation to a catastrophe such as the world has never seen. But if you here, this mighty people, if our people throughout the British Empire, resolutely, firmly, courageously, without flinching, carry out the message, then I have no fear but that humanity will climb to higher altitudes of nobility, of security, of happiness, than any it has ever yet known."

A Wonderful Woman

The majority of people, except those who are residents in Australasia, have never heard of Mrs. Elisabeth Mahoney, yet she is one of the most wonderful women in the world. Trader, engineer, builder, farmer, stock breeder, shipowner and mine owner, she is the uncrowned queen of an island known as Sudest, near New Guinea, where she has lived for the past 33 years.

Control Of Insects

Natural Enemies Should be Used to Help Fight Farmers' Pests

The value of the natural enemies of injurious insects as a means of successful control was the topic of an address at a meeting of the Entomological Society of Ontario, given by Dr. A. F. Burgess, of the Entomological Branch of the United States at Melrose, Mass.

Dr. Burgess has made a special study of the gypsy and brown tail moths for a number of years, and is one of the authorities on their history, habits and control. He said that the natural enemies of these insects were a powerful means of control, and that in the case of all other injurious insects natural enemies should be introduced from the native soil of the pest so as to keep them under control.

Norman Criddle, Entomological Branch at Treesbank, Man., spoke of two problems in natural control and mentioned the wheat stem sawfly as the most serious pest of wheat in Manitoba. It was a grass pest before wheat was grown. The parasites so common in grasses have not yet followed the sawfly into the grain fields, but evidence had been produced to show that they are gaining control in the grain to some extent. They will have to increase more rapidly, however, to be of any real value.

Reference was made to a caterpillar which, in Southern Saskatchewan, depleted enormous areas this past summer and the parasites that controlled it.

To Enforce Game Regulations

Patrolling Posts for Game Guardians in Saskatchewan

Advices from Northern Saskatchewan indicate that the big game season this year will be a prolific one as an abundance of moose and woodland caribou has been met with in the north. To make certain that the game regulations will be observed the government authorities have evolved a plan for the erection of game guardians' cabins at various strategic points and at the present time have fifteen of these put up. They are located at places where trails cross or where trail meets river and so arranged that hunters going into the country or coming out will have to pass them when the guardian will be able to check up on their game bags.

These cabins are built about twenty-five miles apart while under arrangements made with the forestry department the cabins used by the fire rangers are also available to the provincial game department men. As a result of this arrangement a complete chain of observation posts is now practically established across big game country in the north.

Harvesters Get Jobs

Over 10,000 Men From Overseas to Remain in Canada

Of the 11,000 young men who came from the British Isles to help harvest the crops in Western Canada, only about 400 have returned, the balance have decided to take advantage of the offers of employment made to them and remain in Canada. There have been 15,074 jobs found available for the 10,600 harvesters. Over half the number, or 7,846, are for farm jobs, 6,334 are for lumbering and bush work, 460 are required on railway construction in Saskatchewan, while there are openings for land clearing and mining in British Columbia and Alberta, as well as some work opportunities in a number of the trades. It is pointed out that the opportunities for winter employment are necessarily restricted to certain industries. There is not the same range of choice as there would be in the spring when many branches of industry become more active. There is no question that the overseas harvesters who are anxious to remain in Canada over the winter and be on hand for more remunerative employment in the spring will be quick to accept the opportunity presented, at reasonable wages rather than return to the Old Country.

By-Products From Milk

100 Pounds Can Be Utilized in Many Ways

Some interesting figures have been compiled by the United States department of agriculture to show what can be made from a definite quantity of milk. Using 100 pounds of milk which tests 4 per cent., it has been found that this quantity will make about 4.8 pounds of butter, 11 pounds of Cheddar cheese, 45 15-ounce cans of condensed milk, 12.5 pounds of whole-milk powder, 8.5 pounds of Swiss cheese, or 23 pounds of Camembert cheese. The exact amounts of these products that can be made from 100 pounds of milk varies with the richness of the milk in fat and other solids. A number of by-products are also formed by the different processes.

Keeping Butterflies On Ice

Remarkable Experiment Is Being Tried By London Zoo

Nearly 1,000 butterflies are being kept "on ice" at the Zoo to be "thawed" for public exhibition as required during the winter.

This remarkable experiment is being tried owing to the losses hitherto incurred by allowing the insects to remain in the outdoor enclosure, where it is impossible to make adequate provision for hibernation.

The butterflies—Red Admiral, Peacocks and Tortoiseshells—on being taken from the ice safe in which they are confined will be placed in a case containing flowers sprayed with honey, under the glare of a powerful artificial sun.

Charles the Fifth of Germany, ruled over more kingdoms than any other European monarch before or since.

The Traffic In Munitions Requires The Earnest Study Of All Friends Of Peace

Oil In Western Canada

World's Greatest Oil Fields in Alberta, Is Geologist's Assertion

A New York special dispatch says: Chester Thompson, noted geologist and president of the Royal Canadian Syndicate, declared he had found "the greatest oil field in the world without exception which is now in process of development in Southern Alberta, Canada."

This new field is located on what is known as the Sweet Grass Arch which extended from Northern Montana into Central Alberta. The Kevins-Sunburst field in Montana, where about 100 new wells have been brought in so far this year, is located at the extreme southern end of the structure. The greatest production of oil is expected in the Lake Pakowie district where the top of the arch is located.

Concerning developments in Southern Alberta, Mr. Thompson said that the next six months probably would see sensational progress in what he described as "the biggest potential oil supply in the world."

Never in his experience, he said, had he seen a more promising situation and investigations already completed have proved conclusively the existence of oil in large quantities.

At the present time 12 wells are being drilled in Southern Alberta.

Parcels For Germany Dispatched Via England

Direct Parcel Post Service Has Been Temporarily Discontinued

Direct parcel post service to Germany has been discontinued, according to information contained in the Post Office weekly bulletin of October 27.

The bulletin states: Postmasters are informed that the direct parcel post service to Germany has been temporarily discontinued. Parcels for Germany may, until the resumption of the direct service, be accepted for transmission via England at the rates given in the October Supplement.

The Editor Surrendered

The revival of "Pinafore" in London recalls a good old story. Once "Pinafore" became a favorite in London, after its initial failure, everybody began saying: "What, never?—Well, hardly ever!"

One morning a stern London editor called his staff together and delivered the following oration: "Now, listen, I never want that damned expression used in this paper again. In yesterday's issue it occurred by actual count 20 times in as many articles. Thereupon a staff voice from nowhere in particular piped up: "What, never?" The editor surrendered, "Well, hardly ever," he replied, and left the room.

Before dissolving, the Fourth Assembly of the League of Nations voted to make another attempt at securing international agreement for better control of the trade in war implements. Failing to secure the approval of the United States Government, the St. Germain Convention, drawn up in 1919, has become a dead letter. To be practical such an agreement must have the backing of all the principal arms-producing powers; otherwise, the manufacturers of the countries staying out would have the market all to themselves. An invitation will be sent to Washington to designate delegates for the negotiation of another convention which shall be more acceptable to the American Government. As in the case of the opium traffic, here is another opportunity for the New World to take the initiative and make its views prevail. The trade in arms is no less dangerous than the trade in drugs.

The main purpose of the St. Germain Convention was to prevent private firms from selling firearms to the so-called backward peoples. The sale of firewater ought equally to be prohibited. It did not go so far as to secure any degree of disarmament, nor would it have prevented, as Secretary Hughes emphasized in his letter of refusal to sign, the various powers from supplying each other with arms. Its main effect, like that of all the other Paris treaties, would have been to aid the victorious powers in preserving their domains. Near the main manufacturing plant of the biggest French munition firm is a luxurious clubhouse, erected for the entertainment of customers. Among the trophies of the main entrance hall are framed photographs of half the prewar sovereigns of Europe, with their retinues, who had come there to purchase artillery and other war implements. It is a gruesome sight.

In the meantime the whole subject of traffic in arms needs the earnest study of all friends of peace. Under what circumstances is the sale of a cannon to be permitted, a machine gun, a rifle, a revolver? To reach unanimity on these subjects is not easy. So much depends on the point of view. The advertisements of the revolver manufacturers, for instance, always picture the goods offered for sale as being used in the defence of peaceful homes. They never hint peaceful homes. They never hint that the weapons recommended also meet the requirements of the housebreaker and marauder. The international situation is similar. Appropriations for armaments are always asked for in the name of peace, for defensive purposes. And yet there are wars. Likewise, it will be urged that if war implements are not to be bought, how can oppressed races ever hope to gain independence? Modern arms cannot be made except by elaborate machinery, but they can easily be smuggled.

The obverse side of the shield is the secret aid given by some powers to the rebellious subjects of another power. Though perhaps justifiable under certain circumstances, the motive is seldom an altruistic one. More often private manufacturing concerns make large profits from smuggling arms and thereby incite disorder. Sometimes the sale of munitions of war is a part of an official though perhaps secret political programme, in which case only a general treaty providing for a limitation of armaments can be effective. In 1916, men close to President Wilson stressed the desirability of making munitions a Government monopoly so as to remove profit hunger as an incentive of war. If that were done, at least it would be easier to hold governments responsible for the uses to which their products are put.—Christian Science Monitor.

Cranberries a Profitable Crop

The most profitable crop per acre in the United States is cranberries. In 1922 the average return was $228 an acre. Next in line came tobacco, bringing $177 an acre as an average, followed in turn by hops, $100; potatoes, $66; rice, $37; cotton, $35; hay, $19; corn, $16; wheat, $14; barley, $13; oats, $11; rye, $10. The high return for cranberries is accounted for by the fact that they have to be grown in a bog and are picked by hand.

NATIONAL WAY SAVES MANY HOURS

Giving the shortest direct line between eastern and western cities, and not only reducing cost of operation to the railway, but also saving many hours for business men travelling between Eastern and Western Canada, the Long Lake cutoff of the Canadian National Railways will be ready for operation on December 1st, it is expected. By constructing 30 miles of a cutoff, joining the former Canadian Northern main line through Ontario with the Canadian National Transcontinental line, a saving of 76.2 miles will be made in the distance between Winnipeg and Montreal, while the saving between Winnipeg and Toronto will be 102.6 miles. Instead of having to follow the bend of the former Canadian Northern line down to Fort Francis and Port Arthur, trains to Toronto will travel over the Transcontinental line to Nakina and thence down the cutoff to Long Lake, the most northerly point of the Canadian Northern former main line. Business men travelling to Montreal from Winnipeg will thus save three hours and those travelling to Toronto slightly over four hours.

WHEN YOUR THROAT IS SORE

It may be only a slight cold now—just a tickling in the throat.

But little colds soon grow large and dangerous. Often they become chronic, develop catarrh and end in consumption.

Catarrhozone is the remedy. It draws inflammation and soreness out of the throat. Relieves the cough, cuts out the phlegm, makes breathing easy, kills any germs lodged in the mucous lining of the throat or lungs.

By using CATARRHOZONE INHALER now and again you keep the passages free from germs, and thereby prevent coughs and colds. Get the Dollar outfit, it lasts two months; small size, 50c; sold by druggists. Refuse a substitute for Catarrhozone. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Montreal.

CHAPTER TWELVE

The next morning we were all up bright and early, and after breakfast the men set out for Spruce Creek.

And when I could no longer hear the rattle of the wagon I knew that I was really "on my own."

The day promised to be hot, but as there was a pleasant breeze I made a fire and heated water and then proceeded to wash everything washable that I could find, using Mr. Herrington's last cake of soap in the process. I had asked Murray to bring me a tin of stove polish from the village but I had not thought of soap and, as Nicolas pointed out, "We can't telephone here, can we?"

After the house came the garden. I found good potatoes, carrots, onions, turnips, a few beets, beans in the half-way stage between green and ripe, "Country Gentleman" corn almost ready for use, and some rather neglected-looking cabbages and cauliflowers. Evidently Mr. Herrington believed in doing himself well.

The soil, even to my amateur eyes, seemed the sort in which anything would grow, and I determined that the next spring would see a greatly enlarged and improved garden. When I could grow tomatoes and celery and cucumbers successfully in a city backyard there seemed no reason why I should not have even better luck with them in such rich new soil. And I would try raspberries and red and black currants, and perhaps some Everbearing strawberries.

We were on our way to explore the stable when we heard the sound of wheels, a rhythmic rumble and click that was not a wagon, I was sure. The twins were curious and I—I hate to confess it—rather nervous. But the source of the noise soon declared itself, and proved to be nothing more fearsome than Jim Cameron come with his binder to cut the wheat.

Jim was a pleasant-looking young fellow, sunburned and freckled in accordance with his red hair, and the sea-blue eyes whose twinkle rather belied his rather bashful manner. Bashful or not, he was very friendly, and when I asked him to come in at noon and have lunch with me and the children he seemed very much pleased.

After what must have been his seventh or eighth hot biscuit he informed me with a sigh of contentment that it was "going to be great to have a woman in the nighborhood," and my mission, I gathered, was to be a varied one. I was to set an example in home making and culture and to invite my bachelor neighbors to a "real meal" occasionally.

In return for coffee and biscuits and grape marmalade Jim gave me a great deal of useful information. He and his brother had, he said, been in the habit of exchanging work and machinery with Mr. Herrington, and would do so with Murray if he wished it.

"Dickie was an awfully decent sort, and a hard worker in his way," Jim explained, "but he was about as much use on a farm as a snowball—I mean as a pig on ice."

I thanked him for the offer and explained that until Murray was stronger we scarcely know what we would do in the way of farming.

"Well, I don't want to butt in," Jim replied, "but if there is anything I can do for you I hope you will let me know. A person often needs a bit of advice on a new job and Bob and I are old hands at farming."

"There is one thing I want as soon as possible," I said. "Do you know where I can get a good milk cow, or maybe two of them?"

"And some chickens and some pigs," broke in Nicolas, who had been silent for an unusually long while. "One of the cows is for me and one is for Rupert, Cousin Margaret said so. And I am going to feed the chickens, but I don't like pigs."

"If you'll come to visit me you'll see lots of cows and pigs," Jim promised. Then, to me, he explained that while he had a fairly large herd of cattle he had raised them all for beef, but that he thought we might get milk cows at a Galician settlement twelve miles east, or perhaps from one of the settlers nearer home. The price he mentioned as likely to be asked was less than I had expected to pay, the reason, he said, being that feed was scarce and that people were willing to sell cheaply for cash in order to meet their liabilities.

"You'll find, Mrs. Aylwin," he said seriously, "that most of us in this district are just holding on. The land is good, and a man who hasn't too big a proportion of wood on his quarter can do fairly well, especially if he has some livestock and does not have to depend altogether on his crop. Bob and I have about equal parts of timber and hay-land and open prairie, and even we have to stretch pretty hard to make ends met. The people in the bush are worse off, it is no joke to clear that sort of land and what you can get for wood just now does not more than pay for your time. Of course anyone who can stick it out for a few years will be on Easy Street. The soil can't be beaten and we are close to the best market in the West. I expect to live long enough to see this district as prosperous as old Ontario. But in the meantime you'll find that a little cash goes a long way.

His explanation gave me something new to think about. The pioneers, I told myself, were not all dead. With sudden insight I saw our situation in a new light. We had come amongst these people under circumstances very different from their own, and with no idea of making a permanent home nor of taking a share of the hardships. We were "roughing it" only for the sake of Murray's health, I had always reminded myself. Herrington's Hope was to be only an incident in our lives, a humorous one, if possible, but at any rate merely an incident. And I had rather prided myself on my courage; it seemed quite a big thing for a woman to come to such a place for the sake of her husband. But now I realized that I had been pitying myself rather unnecessarily. After all, what was I that I should claim the martyrs' crown for doing willingly what other women did of necessity? I gave myself a proper lecture, and felt the better for it. Homesickness, I concluded, was justifiable, but it must be hidden. And if I were to hold up my head among my neighbors I must avoid as the plague all appearance of superiority or discontent.

The children and I had a very good dinner ready when Murray and Teddy arrived. They brought with them the tin of stove polish, but only half our furniture, as there was too much to be taken in one load. The rest was under cover at the station, and we decided that it must remain there for two or three days, as Murray was so tired that he frightened me.

My men-folk, were, I told them, very intelligent. They had brought in the first load the things we needed most, and had left the piano, the bookcase and the chairs at Spruce Creek.

We did not do much in the way of unpacking that night, for after we had exchanged gossip we were all ready for bed. But the next morning we set to work and soon had everything in place.

I had sold my large rug before we left Winnipeg, and in place of it had bought a linoleum rug to fit the new living-room. One of the arch curtains made a very satisfactory couch cover, and the other one I used for a tablecloth. All the window curtains had to be altered, but the cutting of them down to fit their new places was no very great task, especially as I used only the very narrowest of side-curtains, on account of the low ceilings. The pictures were, for the same reason, hung low. I did not like the plain white walls, and I promised myself two coats of French grey kalsomine in the spring. But after the rest of our furniture had come and the piano and bookcase and chairs were in place we all agreed that we had an unexpectedly pretty room. The book-case, an old one with open shelves, was so roomy that I used the two upper shelves for my pretty odd china and glass and silver, in spite of my instinct to pack them away "in the meantime." The corner cupboard held the kitchen dishes and the most commonly used supplies. Everything else we put, together with my Blue Willow dinner set, in the shelves in the children's room, which we would continue to use as a store-room until we could get a kitchen built. The stove was the one great eyesore. Teddy used almost the whole tin of polish on it, and on himself, but even at that it spoiled my pretty room. A stove is a stove, be it ever so black, but we knew that we would have to put up with it until after harvest, when Mr. Gagnon had promised to help Murray build a kitchen.

The house settled, we turned our attention to the main out-of-doors. For one who was a "handy man" Mr. Herrington must have had some strange lapses. The water, which was good and quite soft, had to be carried, pail-ful by pailful, from the spring. And there was no place where food could be kept cool in the summer and warm in the winter. There was a rain-water barrel on a raised platform near the doorway, and though the water smelled strongly of gasoline I was glad to have it! It was Rupert who discovered the dug-out root cellar in the bank of the Creek near the spring, and though it was inconvenient we kept our perishable foodstuffs there until cooler weather came.

The stable, like the house, was well built and roomy. There was plenty of space for the two cows we meant to get, and the low end under the sloping roof would do for the hens. I planned to have turkeys, too, and with running water so close it seemed a slighting of Nature's gifts not to try ducks and geese as well, but for the present I was prepared to be satisfied with the humble hen. And we would have to build a pig pen, I told Murray. Pigs could not help but be a veritable gold mine when we had to pay as much as fifty cents a pound for a roast of pork in Winnipeg. As it happens, we are still pigless, but we have hopes.

I was very ignorant of all such matters, but I planned to spend the long winter evenings in the close perusal of farm journals, so as to be prepared for the conduct of what Teddy called my "stock farm" in the spring. I kept my resolution, and by the first of March I could have passed an examination on the breeds, habits and treatment of cattle, pigs and fowl of all sorts. The trouble was that the creatures themselves did not always go by the book—the old problem of the personal equation. I learned that hens sometimes ate their own eggs, and that one frequently ran across a temperamental cow. But I have never yet read of a reliable cure for the wanderlust in turkeys, or the constitutional unreasonableness of pigs.

We were very fortunate in getting a good cow before we had been two weeks on the farm. Jim Cameron told us that he believed the Fenwicks, who lived near us, had one for sale. Murray and I went to look at her and as the Fenwicks seemed honest and the cow herself had no outstanding peculiarities, we bought her—and renamed her Carrie, short for Carnation, in memory of the condensed milk that we had hated as no one should hate a friend in need.

Ours was surely beginners' luck. Carrie proved to be a jewel, even if she was only a near-Holstein. She was, the Fenwicks told me, a late cow. And that mean, as I learned by looking wise and saying nothing, that the calf which we had not bought was destined to be very young veal in the fall, and that Carrie would give milk until Spring.

"There's no sense in getting a second cow now," said Jim, "she'd just eat her head off all winter so you'd better let someone else feed her. About the end of March you'll be able to get one with a new calf, and there is no use laying out your money before you have to. Of course you might get one cheaper during the winter, for if you look around you'll likely find someone who'd rather have cash than a cow that must be fed."

"That would seem rather like taking advantage of our neighbors, wouldn't it?" I asked Murray, after I had repeated Jim's advice to him.

"I'm afraid you are not going to find this an idyllic life," was Murray's reply. "So far as I can judge, the thing that is hampering the farmers here is a lack of ready money. They have no reserve capital and so they have to sacrifice the future to the present. I suppose it is the history of all new settlements. Don't let it worry you too much, Margaret Anne—remember that if you buy a cow now for less than it would be worth in the spring your money may help to pay the interest on a loan or to buy groceries. It may be more needed and therefore much more valuable than a cow."

STARVATION IS FACING WORKERS IN RUHR DISTRICT

Berlin.—Negotiations were begun between representatives of the Ruhr industrialists and all the workmen's unions to determine whether the workmen will make sacrifices which the employers consider necessary to meet the terms of the French authorities for the resumption of economic life, and, consequently, reparation deliveries. On the outcome of these negotiations depends to a large extent whether the industrialists will sign agreements and whether unemployment in the Ruhr, already reaching alarming proportions, will increase or diminish.

The industrialists are trying to induce the workmen to accept a ten-hour day, instead of an eight-hour day, for factories and above ground work, and an eight and a half hour day for underground work, instead of seven.

The workers' attitude, as reflected by union leaders, seems to be that they are caught between the upper millstone of the industrialists' pressure and the nether millstone of wholesale unemployment, with danger of starvation. From their conversations they appear to be equally acrimonious against the French for manoeuvring the employers into a position where it is impossible to compete in the world markets and against the employers themselves, whom they blame for using threats of unemployment to get the men to work longer hours.

Already grim starvation is staring several hundred thousand workingmen in the face. Soup kitchens have been opened in most of the Ruhr towns, where the unemployed are seen handing in their pittances of three billion marks for a quart of soup mixture, composed mostly of boiled potatoes and a tiny morsel of bacon.

LITTLE FOXES

BY E. A. HENRY, D.D.

The Famous Novelist, "Ralph Connor," says:

"A fine bit of work. The book is full of quaint philosophy, and it has the heart touch, too, that will give it wings. . . . It was a happy inspiration to use the vernacular of everyday boy-and-girl speech, which lends reality to the thoughts. . . . An admirable selection of illustrations. That is the secret of interesting speech—the power of concreting ideas. A congregation that will drowse or gape over the most logical argument will suddenly awaken to alert attention in response to the phrases, 'Once on a time,' 'There was once a boy,' 'I knew a man.' . . . The author has done a real service to the children, but also to preachers. For many a preacher who has been forced to confess himself a failure in the art of interesting children in sermons, after reading 'Little Foxes,' will take new heart because of the suggestions the book will bring. . . . I venture to say that hosts of people, especially little people and those who think little people worth while, will come to know and love Dr. Henry because of his 'Little Foxes.'" For sale by—

Liquor Cases Affected By Court Decision

Winnipeg.—Not less than 30 Temperance Act cases, about a dozen of them involving liquor selling hotels, are affected by a decision handed down by the Manitoba Court of Appeal, ruling it illegal for police officers in search of liquor to invade premises or arrest individuals without a warrant. Police admit that it will add to the difficulties—already greatly increased by the Government Liquor Control Act—of enforcing the Manitoba Temperance Act.

For British Preference

British Chancellor of the Exchequer Refers to Trade Within the Empire

London.—"A very striking fact about our exports to the Dominions is that nearly all of them are manufactured goods employing a large amount of labor in their production," declared Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer. "The one thing keeping the Dominions from developing their territories is the uncertainty as to what they would be able to sell if they developed them," the Chancellor said.

"The certainty we have now offered them," he added, referring to the preference already announced, "is the security of the British market, which is the finest in the world. It will enable them to place orders with us for locomotives and machinery and to take more settlers from Britain."

Germany's Capacity To Pay

French Ambassador Wants to be Sure Before Replying to U.S.

Paris.—The definition by the semi-official Temps of Germany's "present capacity" to pay reparations, as the international committee of experts is expected by the French Government to understand the phrase, and the newspaper's elucidation of the committee's position regarding the Ruhr, appear to have been made, if not on direct official authority, at least in terms which the official authorities refuse to challenge. These were the two points on which M. Jusserand, French ambassador to the United States, demanded instructions from Paris before giving definite replies to the questions thereon put to him by Secretary Hughes.

Majority for Government Control Over Prohibition System

Calgary.—Returns received from deputy returning officers slightly reduced the lead of Clause D, government control, over Clause A, the prohibition system, but with approximately 75 per cent. of the polls now in throughout the province there is no danger of the big majority being wiped out. The polls yet to come are situated for the most part in isolated districts, where the number will probably be small and so will not affect to any extent the present standing of the four clauses. Returns received gave the following results: A, 50,009; B, 3,221; C, 2,576; D, 74,631.

Bulgarians Apologize To Jugo-Slavians

Sofia.—The Bulgarian Government carried out that part of its programme of apologies to Jugo-Slavia for the recent attack on that country's military attache, Col. Krastitch, which was most galling to the national pride. This consisted of the marching of a company of soldiers, headed by officers, to the gate of the Jugo-Slavia legation, where, with the Bulgarian flag flying and the regimental band playing the Jugo-Slav anthem, the troops saluted the Jugo-Slav flag.

Remove Immigration Bars

Montreal Speaker Says Restrictions Are to Be Lifted

Montreal.—What restrictions now remain upon immigration to Canada will be removed before next spring, very probably within three months, declared Herbert M. Marler, M.P., for St. Lawrence-St. George, in an address before the United Hebrew Political Club here. Mr. Marler said he could make this statement with authority.

Following removal of these restrictions, the only qualifications an immigrant would need to give in order to enter the country would be a sound mind and body and good moral character. In other words, the door would be open to all immigrants who were sound.

He declared that Central Europe was an admirable field for immigrants, and he wished to contrast his views in that respect with views expressed at a meeting here recently by Senator Pope, who, he claimed, had referred to immigrants from that part of Europe as "spotted animals."

Says Prisoners Kept Carrier Pigeon

Suspended Guard Gives Evidence of Startling Nature

Kingston, Ont.—A carrier pigeon was kept by the prisoners in Portsmouth penitentiary for three months and flew back and forth to the outside world for them, according to evidence given by Arthur Twigg, suspended guard of the penitentiary, when he appeared in police court here.

Twigg stated that the pigeon was kept by the prisoners in a little nest made for it in the coal box in the prison yard. It went away shortly after the escape of "Red" Ryan and his gang and has never been seen since.

The suspended guard denied allegations that he had been engaged in carrying letters or of receiving narcotics. He accused the prison authorities of having attempted to "get him" because he had communicated with Gen. St. Pierre Hughes, Superintendent of Penitentiaries.

CANADA BENEFITS BY NEW BRITISH TARIFF PROPOSAL

London.—The British Government is prepared to widen the scope of its offer of imperial tariff preference. At the economic conference, Sir Phillip Lloyd-Braeme, President of the Board of Trade, intimated that in addition to the list already submitted, the British Government was prepared to give tariff preference on fresh apples, canned salmon, fruit juices and honey. In each case the British Government proposes to impose a new duty when these products are imported from foreign countries and admit them free when imported from countries within the Empire.

The proposals are:—

Fresh apples.—Dutiable at five shillings per hundredweight when imported from foreign countries. Empire imports free.

Canned salmon.—Foreign imports to be dutiable at ten shillings a hundredweight. Empire imports free.

Fruit juices.—Foreign imports to be dutiable at sixpence a gallon. Empire imports free.

Honey.—Foreign imports to be dutiable at ten shillings per hundredweight. Empire imports free.

A figure of $700,000 was placed on the property recently.

BACK ACHED TERRIBLY

Mrs. McMahon Tells How She Found Relief by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chatham, Ont.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a run-down condition after the birth of my baby boy. I had terrible pains and backache, and was tired and weak, not fit to do my work and care for my three little children. One day I received your little book and read it, and gave up taking the medicine I had and began taking the Vegetable Compound. I feel much better now and am not ashamed to tell what it has done for me. I recommend it to any woman I think feels as I do."—Mrs. J. R. McMAHON, 153 Harvey St., Chatham, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has for nearly fifty years been restoring sick, ailing women to health and strength. It relieves the troubles which cause such symptoms as backache, painful periods, irregularities, tired, worn-out feelings and nervousness. This is shown again and again by such letters as Mrs. McMahon writes, as well as by one woman telling another. These women know, and are willing to tell others, what it did for them; therefore, it is surely worth your trial.

Women who suffer should write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Cobourg, Ontario, for a free copy of Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women."

Too Many Fairs.

The Department of Agriculture in Manitoba is proposing to consolidate agricultural societies, reducing the number from around 80 to perhaps 20. The consolidation is being considered because of the large sums granted annually to agricultural societies that hold fairs that really serve no useful purpose. The province spends annually $80,000 by way of grants to agricultural societies, which money is distributed as prize money to exhibitors of live stock, farm and household products at the fair. It has been recognized for some time that too many societies were in existence and too much money was being spent on weak societies that gave little to the communities in which they are located. The proposal, therefore, to reduce the number and strengthen those that are retained should meet with with general approval, even by the societies that will go out of existance as the result of the consolidation

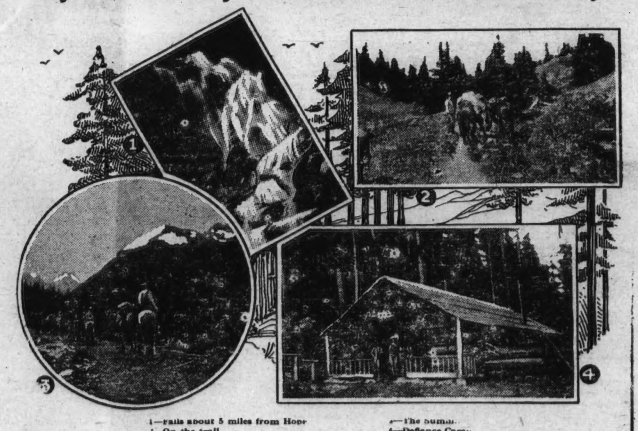
By Strawberry Flats and the Silver Daisy



1—Falls about 5 miles from Hope
2—On the trail
3—The Sumac
4—Defiance Camp

The little village of Hope, situated on the Fraser River about one hundred miles from the coast, is the starting point for all mountaineers wishing to reach the interior of British Columbia by the trail route. It is a scattered village of about two hundred inhabitants but possessing both an abundance of natural beauty and a truly romantic past. The village is flanked on one side by the noble Fraser river, while from the other side one looks up three wide draws in the mountain ranges. The one to the left is the beautiful Coquihalla valley through which the turbulent Coquihalla river cascades from a pass unmatched for rugged grandeur. Through this pass too, under innumerable snow sheds and tunnels the Kettle Valley Railway goes to Princeton and the interior. In the centre is an opening for the Nicolum river, to the right is the Silver Creek draw and beyond it the snow-capped peaks of the Cascade range.

The mountain trail over the Hope Pass is the old one known as the Dewdney which was surveyed and partly built for twenty-five miles out of Hope, by English Sappers in 1861. It winds up the Coquihalla River for a short distance, then branches off with the Nicolum, a tributary of the former river. The way lies through Sylvan glades, past rushing waterfalls and over rustic bridges, the old dry "cribbing" of which is as firm as the day when it was laid.

The first feeding ground for horses is at 12 Mile Lake —otherwise known as Divide Lake at an altitude of 2300 feet. This lake is the head waters of the Nicolum river. Here there is a beautiful hay meadow owned by a trapper and prospector who is patiently awaiting the day when the transprovincial road will give him a means of transporting his wealth in the shape of hay, to outside points.

At 22 Mile there is another beautiful camping spot. Here there is a large cabin situated in the forest's heart on the very banks of the Skagit river. The owner of it carries on prospecting and mining operations in the vicinity. He appropriately calls his cabin "Defiance Camp" and his mine "The Silver Daisy."

From here on for many miles the scenery becomes more wonderful, if that were possible, but at the same time more wild and rugged. The Pass, a narrow hallway bounded by cliffs thousands of feet high, is a sight of never-ending marvel. At one spot, known as Skagit bluffs, the trail (a bare 18 inches wide) winds around the shoulder of a cliff which towers above and drops away a sheer one thousand feet to the bed of the river below.

Then the trail once more drops down to the next feeding grounds at Cayuse Flats which has a sister spot three miles farther on—Cedar Flats. Beyond Cedar Flats lies a long strip of heavy cedar timber, a true "forest primeval." Strawberry Flats, a pleasant open field on the Skagit river at a height of 3700 feet is the last stopping place before the actual ascent to the summit begins. Here, in spite of the high altitude, wild strawberries grow in abundance.

In the next 2500 feet (of the perpendicular of course) one is led to the summit by a series of switchbacks zigzagging up the face of the mountain. The river, which at the foot appeared a torrent, is here a tiny stream, a mere trickle over the stones. Below, the ever-lasting hills unroll themselves for a hundred miles of valley and peak.

When the summit itself is attained a sight never to be forgotten appears. A wide open meadow lies in an inverted crown on the mountain top. Around its edge rise whitish cliffs scarcely distinguishable from the many snow banks. And everywhere, even beside the snow, grows a bewildering variety of wild flowers.

In the centre of the depression lie two lakes, the dividing of the waters, for from the one goes the Skagit river towards the sea and from the other flows the Whip Saw Creek towards the interior lakes.

As soon as the descent of the eastern slope is begun a great change is noticeable. The grade is easy and steady, the country becomes more open and is clear of the under-brush and ferns so characteristic of the western slope.

The last camp is twenty miles from Princeton but the last nine miles of that distance are covered by a good motor road, the beginning of the proposed Trans-provincial-highway from Princeton to Hope.

About eight miles from Princeton is a wonderfully interesting spot where stratified rocks yielding excellent fossils remains are located on the side of the hill.

Shortly after this the valley opens out before one. Princeton snuggled peacefully into a friendly circle of hills and its two rivers, the Similkameen and Tulameen keeping guard over it. Beyond it, rises a splendid vista of rolling green foothills with more rugged mountains closer in, indicative of the districts most flourishing industries, ranching and mining.

"LITTLE FOXES"

By E. A. Henry, D.D.

Interesting Stories For Young Folks

Published By Permission Thomas Allen, Publisher

SELFISHNESS

My, that is a nasty little fox!— If it gets into your garden it will spoil it, sure as guns!

Not that you and I are to have no selves. That kind of a person is an empty, silly, shallow body. You want the biggest self you can get. And you need to care for yourself. For if you do not, you will have no self with which to care for anyone else.

And you need a true self-love, for if you stop truly loving yourself, you will soon have nothing with which to love anyone else.

But selfishness means you cannot see anybody else but yourself.

Selfishness means putting yourself in the centre and expecting everybody and everything to dance to your music.

A little boy said to his sister, "Mary, there would be more room for me on this sofa if one of us was to get off!"

Was he not a selfish boy? Who would want to have that kind of child around—that expects the whole house to get out of his way so he could blow himself?

Some one tells a story of the sweetness of the unselfish life of a little ragged bootblack, who sold his kit to get a quarter to pay for a notice in the paper of the death of his little brother. When the kind newspaper man asked if it was his little brother, with a quivering chin he said, "I had to sell my kit to do it, b-but he had his arms aroun' my neck when he d-died!"

The news went round and that same day at evening, he found his kit on the doorstep, with a bunch of flowers bought with pennies by his chums, who were touched by his unselfish act.

There is something very attractive about a girl or boy who thinks of others and forgets self.

I have read of the wonderful St. Bernard dogs in the mountains of Switzerland.

There is a house called a hospice, 8,000 feet above sea level, where the monks live who keep the dogs to watch for lost travellers who may perish in the snow.

The dogs have baskets strapped on their backs, which contain food for lost men. They are trained so that they will find people and guide them to the place of safety.

The story that interested me was of an Englishman who wanted to see the dogs at work.

The monks told him that the best dog had been out for some time and they were becoming worried over his absence.

In a few moments, in the dog came, looking completely discouraged. He seemed to have no spirit, although all his companions were barking and jumping around him. The old dog paid no attention, but went and lay down in a sort of hopeless way, without even wagging his tail—like all good dogs do that are pleased with themselves.

The explanation of the monks made me think.

They told the Englishman that that was the way the dog always acted whenever he had failed to help any traveller.

Just, think, girls and boys, of the instinct of a well-trained dog—so deeply set on helping, that failure, even when he was not to blame for it, made him ashamed and sad!

Surely we will at least be equal to a trained St. Bernard.

Surely we should far surpass him, by voluntarily, of our own loving choice, seeking to help in a life of shining unselfishness.

Excellent Christmas Service To The Old Country

The Canadian Pacific have made available a fleet of superb steamships and an unusual number of sailings for Christmas travel to the Old Country. In connection with these sailings special tourist sleepers are being operated from Edmonton, Saskatoon, Calgary, Moose Jaw, Regina and Winnipeg, direct to the ship's side at West St. John, thus giving a through service with the only change or transfer being from train to steamer.

The December sailings for which these cars will be operated are: S.S. "Montclaire," December 7th, to Liverpool; S.S. "Melita," December 13th, to Southampton; S.S. "Montcalm," December 14th, to Liverpool; and S.S. "Marloch," December 15th, to Glasgow.

In addition to the through tourist sleepers, a special train will also be operated for the sailing of the S.S. "Montcalm," December 14th. This train will leave Winnipeg 9.50 a.m. Tuesday, December 11th. Special cars from western points will be attached to this train for operation through.

Booking should be arranged early in order to secure the best accommodation, and any Canadian Pacific Agent can make full arrangements. 23-23

Schooner On Iceberg

A steamer was rounding Cape Horn recently when the captain saw a gigantic iceberg floating in the water, and on it was a large three-masted schooner with its boats still in position, but apparently no one was on board. It was impossible to get near enough to it to see its name, and what had happened to its crew remains a mystery.

HEART WAS SO BAD HAD TO SIT UP IN BED

Mrs. O. E. Fitzgerald, 106 Ross St., St. Thomas, Ont., writes:—"In the Fall of 1921, I was taken ill with my heart, but I did not pay much attention to it. I kept on with my household duties, but seemed to become worse and worse, and finally had to call in a doctor. He said I was all run-down and was a nervous wreck. I had a severe pain in my chest which would move over to my heart and it became so bad I could not lie down, as when I did I had such a smothering feeling I would have to sit up in bed till it passed away.

I tried several remedies, but with no good results. Finally, I was induced to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took 7 boxes, and I am now as well as I was 30 years ago, and I am now 65 years old."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all druggists or dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Air Travel Popular With Invalids

Austria now has an aerodrome at Mauer, half an hour's ride by automobile from the centre of the city. Planes may be had at all hours for any destination within the country. Air travel is growing popular with invalids who want to reach health resorts quickly and free of the jolting and discomfort attending trips by train.

GOOD RED BLOOD A REAL NERVE TONIC

Weak, Watery Blood the Source of All Nervousness

"If people would attend to their blood, instead of worrying themselves ill," said an eminent nerve specialist, "we doctors would not see our consulting rooms crowded with nervous wrecks. More people suffer from worry than anything else."

The sort of thing the specialist spoke of is the nervous, run-down condition caused by overwork and the many anxieties of to-day. Sufferers find themselves tired, low-spirited and unable to keep their minds on anything. Any sudden noise hurts them like a blow. They are full of groundless fears, do not sleep well at night. Headaches and other nerve pains are part of the misery, and it all comes from starved nerves.

Doctoring the nerves with poisonous sedatives is a terrible mistake. The only real nerve tonic is a good supply of rich red blood. Therefore to relieve nervousness and run-down health Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be taken. These pills enrich the blood, which tones the nerves, improves the appetite, gives new strength and spirits, and makes hitherto despondent people bright and cheerful. If you are at all "out of sorts" you should begin taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
